

BULATS Speaking Part One script and practice

Ask your partner the questions below, sticking exactly to the wording in the script (but skipping the follow-up question in brackets if they have already answered that question).

Examiner: Good morning. Come in. Take a seat please. My name's _____ and I'm your examiner today. Can I check your ID, please?

Candidate: _____

Examiner: Thank you. And what would you like me to call you?

Candidate: _____

Examiner: I'd like to start by asking you some questions about yourself. Is that okay?

Candidate: _____

Examiner: Do you live near here?

Candidate: _____

Examiner: Are you working, or are you a student?

Candidate: _____

Examiner: So, I'd like to ask you about your job. What is your typical working day like?

Candidate: _____

Examiner: And do you enjoy your job?

Candidate: _____

Examiner: (Why makes you say that?)

Candidate: _____

Examiner: Is this your first job?

Candidate: _____

Examiner: And what would you like to do in the future?

Candidate: _____

Examiner: Let's move on and talk about your free time and hobbies. How do you usually spend your weekends?

Candidate: _____

Examiner: Do you have any plans for this weekend?

Candidate: _____

Examiner: How did you use to spend your weekends when you were a child?

Candidate: _____

How could you ask the top three questions with different words?

Switch roles and do it again, but using different language to ask the same questions.

Switch roles again, but this time asking similar past, present and future questions about travel and language study.

Do it one last time, but about two topics that you haven't talked about yet.
